

CAPT Mark D. Miller, RS, MPH, is a Senior Environmental Health Officer with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. He holds a Bachelor of Science in Environmental Health from East Central University in Ada, Oklahoma and a Masters in Public Health from the University of Texas and is a Registered Sanitarian with the state of Texas. His 25 years of environmental health experience includes, water, wastewater, food safety, injury prevention and hazardous waste. He has served in positions with private industry, Indian Health Service, Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry and currently the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

He serves as co-lead for the Environmental Health Training in Emergency Response project at the CDC, National Center for Environmental Health, Environmental Health Services Branch

His Emergency Response Experience includes:

Plague Investigations Navajo Reservation 1988, 1990
Hanta Virus Outbreak – Four Corners Region 1993
911 Attacks – New York City, 2001
Anthrax – AMI Bldg Boca Raton, Fl, 2001
Hurricane Jeanne, Francis and Ivan - Florida, 2004
Tsunami – Environmental Health Team Lead, CDC Emergency Operations Center 2005
Hurricane Katrina and Rita – Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas 2005
Hurricane Gustav - CDC Emergency Operations Center 2008
Haiti Earthquake - CDC Emergency Operations Center 2010

Contact Information:

Mark D. Miller, R.S., M.P.H.
Captain, U.S. Public Health Service
Senior Environmental Health Officer
Center for Disease Control and Prevention
National Center for Environmental Health
Environmental Health Services Branch
4770 Buford Highway, NE (F60)
Atlanta, Ga 30341-3724
mdmiller@cdc.gov
Ph: 770-488-7652
Fax: 770-488-7310